When the boosters arrive at the town of Skiatook they will see one of the most wonderful cities in the United States. The element that has made this city such a wonderful place is the business men of the town. When the business men of Skiatook start anything they finish it up. Not merely finish to be through with the job, but in a way that brings honor to the city, county, state and nation at large. This was demonstrated most forcibly last year in the Liberty loan drives and the Red Cross campaigns. The system in vogue at Skiatook was to accept the quota assigned them, multiply it a few times and then over-subscribe the latter amount. It never takes over 12 hours to accomplish the desired results. It is a wonderful achievement, for while the community is well-to-do there are no rich men in Skiatook. The only reason for this is the community spirit. The all for one and one for all spirit that should pervade in all cities, and does pervade in this hustling town of northern Tulsa county.

Most cities, when they wish for civic improvements such as paving the streets, etc., vote bonds for this purpose. Not this bunch of hustlers. They are too busy to take time holding elections. For instance: The business men decided that the entire business district of the town should be paved. Four or five of the active boosters started out one fine morning, made a canvass and raised the amount necessary by subscription. To realize fully what this means try and raise $28,000 in some of the other cities you know and see how far you get. Skiatook asserts that it can't be done anywhere else.

Skiatook owns its own waterworks system and electric light plant and are willing to purchase the gas franchise if it can be bought from the present owners. There is a deal on towards this end now.

Before winter sets in there will be hard surface roads running out from Skiatook in all four directions for a radius of 35 miles.

Much of the success of Skiatook is due to the two banks. The Oklahoma National bank of which A. W. Lucas is president and the First National bank, C. H. Cleveland president, are always ready to do anything that will help the city and community. There are two excellent garages in town, the Service garage and the Skiatook garage. An up-to-date theater, under the management of John Atchison looks after the amusement of the people of Skiatook. One of the pioneers of Skiatook is Al. K. Feigley who opened a department store in 1887. He has always been identified with everything that had a tendency for the up-building of the city. His son, H. L. Feigley, entered the firm in 1905. Dickason Goodman have one of their largest lumber yards at this point, under the management of Charles C. Costello. Steinberg and Lucas are drilling contractors, operating in the oil fields of this neighborhood, and have several strings of tools in operation. The Rexall is the leading drug store of the town and makes a specialty of real Navajo rugs. You will find one of the largest stocks of these rugs here that can be found outside of the reservation. Two of the stores handling a general line of merchandise are the stores of C. E. Strange and the Hass Co. Both are right up to the minute and good merchants. The hardware business is looked after by the Parshall boys, good town boosters and always identified with any movement that will benefit the town. There is a dandy hotel here, The Alamo; good eats and good beds are found here. Speaking of eating, the White Inn is a favorite place for both the homefolk and the transients.

In this same connection there is a bakery here that is known all over Tulsa county, The City Bakery, owned by E. H. Profitt, who also has a place in Collinsville. Last, but not least, is the seed firm of R. J. Greenwood & Co., who do a business in grain, hay, flour and farm implements.
